You should note that past performance is not a reliable indicator of future returns and the value of your investments can fall as well as rise. The total return reflects performance without sales charges or the effects of taxation, but is adjusted to reflect all on-going fund expenses and assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gains. If adjusted for sales charges and the effects of taxation, the performance quoted would be reduced.

UPDATE....

This is a new fund and therefore we would suggest that it may be better to monitor rather than invest as there is no real track record. However, some investors may already know the Mirabaud investment team and invest on basis of funds that they manage.

The fund looks to exploit the long-term growth opportunities within emerging and frontier economies. By 2050, 6 of the top 10 economies will come from emerging markets, and 4 out of the top 5 will be emerging economies. The E7 economies will provide greater global growth than the current G7 economies.

Debt within these economies is much lower than developed economies. The manager doesn't believe the mandate of the fund should be fixed and therefore adopts a blended approach rotating between local and hard currency bonds. (Local is the economies currency and hard tends to dollar currency).

The fund can invest up to 20% in frontier economies and invests in both government and corporate debt. They can invest across 40 different economies.

An example of opportunities is the growth of the middle classes and wealth concentration within major cities. The fund has been able to invest in a bond issue to finance a new airport in Mexico. The airport is expected to be the largest airport globally by passenger numbers. These are the types of opportunities the fund is looking at. They are also finding opportunities in Uruguay and Russia.

In summary, for those who believe in the emerging market story it seems to make sense to blend this type of fund with emerging market equities. This fund feels different because of its approach of blending currency and using frontier markets where opportunities arise. The performance is difficult to judge as emerging markets have had a challenging period. We were impressed by the management team and would see this as a fund to monitor.
