You should note that past performance is not a reliable indicator of future returns and the value of your investments can fall as well as rise. The total return reflects performance without sales charges or the effects of taxation, but is adjusted to reflect all on-going fund expenses and assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gains. If adjusted for sales charges and the effects of taxation, the performance quoted would be reduced.

UPDATE....

The primary aim of the fund is to provide investors with exposure to markets which are often missed by emerging market investors. For example, the three main country weightings in this fund are Indonesia, Vietnam and Egypt.

The team explained that the story behind Frontiers remains; they offer attractive valuations, growth opportunities, under researched and missed opportunities and a strong domestic focus. The fund can invest in what is called the forgotten forty.

What they like about this universe is that it is in growing markets and no-one else is offering the same opportunities for investors. This fund purely focuses on the domestic economy for example, banks. Other examples include auto, cement and real estate in Indonesia, healthcare and construction in Egypt and healthcare in Saudi Arabia.

The performance has fallen behind emerging markets but they believe the shift to the forgotten 40 will give them the opportunity to outperform areas like China and Korea.

In terms of companies these tend to be small to mid-cap.

In terms of geographic weightings, they have reduced down their weighting to Latin America and increased exposure to Asia. One additional point they made is that a single company can be larger than some of the countries they invest in in terms of Nominal GDP. For example, Netflix is larger than Greece and Turkey combined, SABIC is bigger than Pakistan, Kazakhstan, Baltic, Balkans and Ukraine and Square is bigger than Nigeria.

In summary, as an alternative to emerging markets this does provide investors a different investment set. There is more risk due to the countries they invest in but there is the potential for greater opportunities as these are countries often missed and those that have the potential for greatest growth in the future.
